

Supply Chain & Logistics

Why Lloyd Morgan?

Knowledge is power, and our consultants are no different. They have a number of years of industry specialisation in the recruitment of Supply Chain professionals, and an undoubted passion for what they do. This has been achieved through forging long term, sustainable partnerships with candidates and clients, with results attained through continued excellence in delivering on complex and challenging projects. More often than not, good candidates become valued clients, and it is this relationship that drives our consultants to develop and grow these into what can sometimes become friendships.

Consultants

Our Supply Chain team is passionate and dedicated, and coupled with their undoubted knowledge and understanding, is able to both assist and guide clients and candidates to achieve a successful outcome with most assignments. With an average of 7 years' recruitment experience, usually in their chosen discipline, our consultants can be considered true experts in their industry. They will offer a collaborative and consultative service, as well as the most up to date recruitment methodologies. Their excellent referral networks allow them to 'own their market', often advising clients and candidates on all matters that are Supply Chain.

Candidates

In the current climate, most professional disciplines across industry are at record lows, with shortages hitting businesses hard. Because of this it is even more vital to apply a confidential, collaborative approach in assisting our candidates in furthering their careers. This is when the insight and expertise of our consultants is vital, as they are up to date with latest recruitment trends, salary expectations, inside information and general industry knowledge. Most of our consultants are members of industry associations relevant to their particular disciplines so meet regularly with the people that they recruit for, and receive latest media and industry news first hand.

Clients

Our clients are among the best known and well established, and have relied on our services for a number of years, often following a particular consultant. This relationship driven style has been built around our consultants' reputation and success in the market place, with the trust and confidentiality bestowed upon them paramount to their success. Dialogue is always open and honest, and advice is both received and given in equal measure, more often than not resulting in a timely and successful outcome.

If we can assist you or your business, we look forward to having a confidential discussion to take you to that next level.
